Accompanied by his wife and her friends, Gant decided on a dip at a Stanley Park beach. He misjudged the depth of the water, dove into the shallow end of the pool and struck his head on the rocky bottom. Gant was in the water almost half a hour before he was missed.

Killing Production

Naturally the restriction placed on the output of crude oil from Turner Valley is not popular in that part of the province. In a column of re-broadcast the Calgary Alberta observes: "Canadian railways are belly-aching over the loss of revenues but apparently cannot move oil from Alberta to start in competition with oil from the United States, Peru and Venezuela."

Wherefore, while the Turner Valley wells are being choked off, Canada during April brought in crude oil from foreign countries totalling 51,523,000 gallons. It is to be hoped when the new Transportation Commission gets into action it will find somewhere in the statute that it has power to tell the railways to let their business to haul freight at rates the traffic can bear.

Those Weeds

June 20th has been set as the last day of grace for the property-owner whose lot is a mess-heap. Unless the owner of the "noxious" weeds by that date the city will set men to do it and charge him with their wages. But the dandelion is exempt—the biggest nuisance of all. This poet-praised pest is not exempt because of its beauty but because of its numbers and its vitality. To tell the property-owner to get rid of the dandelions in his lawn and garden would only be to tell him to do what he has been trying to do for years, with little or no prospect of success.

If the city threatened to send men to uproot his dandelions the property-owner would likely tell it to send them along any time. The wage-bill would be terrific if they stayed long enough to make much of a showing, but the property-owner would have a come-back at the city for not finishing the job. And however they tolled the weed-killers could not free the premises of dandelions. Another crop would come up smiling when spring returns again.

That the dandelion is apparently not killable is no reason why other weed nuisances should not be destroyed. Quite the contrary. But if besides decreasing death to the others the city council could tell the property-owner how to get rid of the dandelion, it would earn his lasting gratitude.

Suppose Everybody Curtailed?

Is Canada a "finished" country? Have we reached the maximum of output? Is wealth-production, trade, and population? Is there no future expansion probable of the industrial and commercial operations whereby our people live, and hence no probability that our population of ten millions will become twenty?

One might infer so from the appeals which are being made to parliament to sanction and facilitate the abandonment of railway lines, the cancelling of trains, the closing of stations, the curtailment of railway employment. On the evidence of these proposals alone it would be difficult to reach any other conclusion than that the Dominion is "through" in respect to development, new enterprise, increase of population, and all that goes to make national greatness.

The keynote of this retrenchment plan is defeatism. It is based on the assumption that the railways can only survive by cutting down expenditure; that they have no hope or chance of building up business and thus drawing larger revenues. As Mr. Bennett aptly stated it, the idea is that "we should retreat our steps and cancel the 5000 miles of railway lines." The essence of it is that we have built more railways than there is any likelihood of using profitably; wherefore the thing to do is to rip up trackage and send it to the dump.

If the sponsors of this retrenchment are right, then everybody should do what it is proposed the railways should do. "We should retreat our steps and cancel the 5000 miles of railway lines." The essence of it is that we have built more railways than there is any likelihood of using profitably; wherefore the thing to do is to rip up trackage and send it to the dump.

match together, whether they march forward or backward.

Does any balanced person in Canada think this conception can be right? Do the sponsors of railway retrenchment really think so? Evidently not. For in the intervals of arguing that the railways must beat a retreat they keep telling us that the country is bound to go ahead. That it is a boundless field for productive investment, a land of hope and promise, that its future is greater than we have dreamed. While they argue that the railways should curtail, they preach that every other commercial interest should expand.

If the preaching is right—and it is—the argument for railway curtailment is absurd. Suppose every other interest did what it is proposed the railways should do—disassemble equipment, throw away development plans, fire employees, cut expenditure to the concept of despair that there is no new business in prospect to warrant even the present set-up? The sponsors of railway curtailment would be the first men to get on the soap and protest that we were committing national suicide and refusing to believe in a national greatness as assured as tomorrow's sunrise.

Canada isn't "finished." It has only got started. It is suffering just now from growing pains in several parts of the national anatomy—the railway organs included. The curtailment is painful, because net earnings are down. Of course they are down. Drought, depression and a vicious, antiquated "sound money" policy have put them down. Give the country relief from these and the panic will end. Restore healthy business conditions and no more will be heard about ripping up railway tracks, dismissing railwaymen, and the other items in the defeatist program. It is not a salvaging operation the railways need; it is more traffic. Traffic which can be created by a constructive policy of national development carried out with "money and credit issued in terms of the public need."

Editorial Notes

The tourist publicity season has arrived. Residents at one Ontario resort say they saw something out in the lake. Ogepogo may be expected to bob up anywhere any day.

Three delegates representing Calgary unsuccessfully allied the Parliament looking for the relief investigating committee set up by the Alberta legislature. Whether or not they find the committee, the delegates should not have to walk back or ride the rods. If their homes are in Calgary, the province ought to be generous enough to pay their return fares.

Current Comment

Mining in B.C.

For those who have succumbed to the momentary lack of confidence that, for no reason at all, has swept over Canada, destroying faith in our economic development, a study of British Columbia's mining industry would be a welcome exercise.

Mining in this province is continuing to absorb workers at the 1000-per-year rate it has maintained for the past six years. Mill construction and other large capital improvements have shown no signs of slackening and, indeed, due to new gold mine developments, have caused an appreciable increase in the volume of heavy machinery moving out of Vancouver at present.

In some cases, manufacturers have not yet been able to catch up with the demand. Between 300 and 400 more have gone to work on daily wages in the Zerkow camp this spring and the Cariboo has taken on nearly as many. Neither area has yet reached its peak in employment.

New gold production in British Columbia will this year nearly compensate for the lower value of base metals and 1937's output of $74,000,000 will be almost if not altogether equalled.—Vancouver Sun.

A New Empire Court

Mr. Hon. R. B. Bennett strikes a note that should meet with favorable response throughout the Empire when he advocates the formation of a "Manly appeal" to the present judicial committee of the Privy Council.

It has long been obvious that the Privy Council, for Canada, at least, offered a judicial advantage in providing a final appeal in constitutional matters completely detached from the exigencies of practical politics.

At the same time, the Privy Council, it has been felt, has contributed to decisions that have been theoretically sound in law but lacked the element of sympathy with Canadian conditions which could only be acquired by those knowledge of those conditions and which were essential to complete justice.

The Empire court, composed of a balanced bank of judges representing all sections of the empire, would be a more effective tribunal for the settlement of differences arising between the various imperial units.

Contrariness in Eire

Mr. Eamon de Valera has decided on having a general election in June 17, and to do so took advantage of a defeat in the Dail on a vote that could not possibly have been won by his government.

He must feel pretty assured of being returned with a clear majority, which his party does not at present have.

The electorate denied Mr. de Valera a majority in the last election because he had not done the things his opponent, Mr. Cosgrave, said he would do. Mr. de Valera's government was not returned to power, and so could not give effect to the platform that appealed strongly enough to the voters to keep Mr. de Valera's party from getting complete power.

Mr. de Valera did, when elected, exactly what he said he would do. He did not do the things his opponent, Mr. Cosgrave, said he would do. He did not do the things his opponent, Mr. Cosgrave, said he would do. He did not do the things his opponent, Mr. Cosgrave, said he would do.

The assumption is that since Mr. de Valera has gained what the farmers most needed, they will not be inclined to desert him. He supported Mr. Cosgrave because his platform was the one they wanted, and now that, in short, Mr. de Valera has given effect to the platform, they will not desert him.

Your Health

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

The best time to keep your health is before you lose it. Many people are finding that the regular health examination best serves the purpose of protecting health while they still have it.

The health examination is an additional value in that it helps you to stay well by stopping disease before it is well started. Such an examination will detect the first stages of disease while the disorder is yet curable, and will save the unnecessary suffering which must inevitably follow when the first disease symptoms are neglected.

The purpose of the health examination as given regularly to those in average good health is to help the patient to maintain the highest possible physical well-being in order that he may get more out of life-day by day. During the examination, the individual is given a thorough checking-over to make sure that all of the vital organs are doing their work properly. Any incipient disease conditions are detected and remedied as soon as possible, often with the desirable result of greatly increasing the efficiency of the person examined.

When you have been given a thorough examination and it has been found that every part of the body is sound, this brings a special assurance which banishes worry about disease. It is the best possible antidote for all of the troubles, fear of cancer, or fear of tuberculosis.

Furthermore, the health examination will prove the best insurance against a breakdown during the most productive years—the years of middle age.

In the course of the examination, the doctor makes a careful study of the condition of the heart and other organs are the strongest and which are comparatively the weakest. Incipient troubles are detected before they become serious and advice is then given for the express purpose of teaching the patient those things he must do in order to stay well. He will thus keep the health of his body and all probabilities of a long and happy life. Life insurance statistics show that those receiving physical examinations live longer than those who do not receive such examinations.

The physical examination has been used for considerable time with certain groups, for example, the Army and Navy. In the Army, a physical examination was given a partial examination. Young men wishing to join the Army or Navy were also given a physical examination. In the Navy, a physical examination was given to the adult in apparent good health was given chiefly for the purpose of finding out his condition and for the purpose of giving him advice in any particular way. The health examination as now advocated is given for the express purpose of helping the patient to gain health in every way possible. Minor troubles are found and corrected, and advice is being regarding eating, sleeping, exercise, recreation and the development of good mental habits.

The benefits of a health examination are outstanding. It has been found that people who have had their health examined are more abundant. It is given specific instructions as to how to live so as to keep the health of the body and all probabilities of a long and happy life. Life insurance statistics show that those receiving physical examinations live longer than those who do not receive such examinations.

The aim of the health examination is to place emphasis on keeping well. Beyond any question it is the best insurance against a breakdown during the most productive years—the years of middle age. Your health is your greatest possession—take care of it while you still have it.

Straight Win; Hit Hard

For 5-4 Triumph

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Relief pitcher Wiley Hudin drove out a looping double in the 10th inning to give Cleveland Indians their second victory in two days over Washington. The score was 5-4.

The Senators came within one out of winning in the ninth, but failed to have Ted Heath of Fort William and the game into extra innings with a triple after two outs. The blow struck Lynn Lary.

VALIDITY OF ALBERTA ACT BEING TESTED

Proposed Agricultural Land Relief Statute Before Appeal Court

CALGARY, June 6.—Test of the validity of Alberta's proposed Agricultural Land Relief Act, providing for a seven per cent tax on agricultural land, comes before the appeal court of Alberta here today.

The act, adopted by the legislature in April but un proclaimed, comes before the court by way of a reference from the government. The act, better known as the proposition to tax agricultural land, was passed by the legislature in April but un proclaimed, comes before the court by way of a reference from the government.

The reference will be heard by the full appeal court headed by Chief Justice Maclellan.

Replacing farm land taxes, the act also includes provisions for a crop insurance fund.

The reference is fourth on the list of court cases to be argued and decided at the afternoon session today.

Western Stock Growers' Association members, in convention here last week, urged the government to withdraw support of the act until further study could be made.

The new act, which was introduced, urged an investigation into the "taxable principle" he made by the committee, represented by all agricultural interests.

The United Farmers of Alberta and the United Farm Women of Alberta are also opposed to the act.

In a statement issued following an executive meeting at central headquarters for the day, the association was charged the proposed tax collecting plan "deprives rural communities of self-government by placing full authority for administration of funds outside the hands of one man, Hon. Louis Maynard, minister of municipal affairs."

It also declared the act "an equitable, unjust and unworkable" law, which would "bring disaster" since April the new legislation has been both approved and condemned in resolutions.

Militiawomen In Parade

In marked contrast to previous Mexican May Day parades, 5000 men and women marched through the streets of Mexico City without any disturbance.

Instead of carrying guns as in previous years the women carried shields and staves.

BONDAGE OR FREEDOM? SAID ISSUE

Aberhart Refuses To Pre-announce Result Saskatchewan Election

CALGARY, June 6.—Election of Saskatchewan will vote next Wednesday, June 8, in the provincial election for "freedom or continued bondage" declared Premier William Aberhart of Alberta here today.

The act, adopted by the Calgary Proprietary Bible Institute, Mr. Aberhart said the issue "is clear cut. The decision is made for you."

"Some are confident Social Credit will win. I have no doubt of prophecy in matters of this kind," he said.

If he said 10 to 15 cents it must be that we have done well. I am hoping that we may secure 20 to 30 cents."

FORM GOVERNMENT
The premier said 28 seats would be enough to form a government. There are 52 seats in the Saskatchewan legislature.

Mr. Aberhart will return to the Saskatchewan election campaign tonight.

"We shall be in Estevan Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock and at Regina at night," he said. "I am hoping that we may secure 20 to 30 cents."

He said the world was watching with interest the result of the election in Saskatchewan.

"Social Credit makes any showing whatever, it will give the contradiction to the published figures on the world's economy. The people come to consciousness."

FIGHTING MACHINE
The world must realize that in Saskatchewan we have a fighting machine which a good Liberal told the other day was "the greatest machine in the world."

He said the world was watching with interest the result of the election in Saskatchewan.

"Social Credit secured 24 to 26 seats. The finger of destiny has been laid on the party on the wall of the old line parties with their banqueting and highfalutin' orations at the expense of the common people."

"Next Wednesday, June 8, is a memorable day—historic, shall I say. Everybody will be voting for freedom or continued bondage."

Mr. Aberhart declared he would be satisfied with the result. If he failed, he would leave the party to the people's desire. It will be time to continue as they are, then no harm to us at all."

"Social Credit should be given a chance to win. If it can't win, then the people should know. If it can and will remedy the present chaotic condition of the country, it should be given a chance to win."

He said many western people and a large number of "eastern friends" would be "free and opportunistic" to give Social Credit a real, genuine test.

"I am prepared to drop politics while it is done," said the premier.

"True there is money against us, but I have found that the men who are a good deal of money are not to be trusted."

He said the words of Upton Sinclair and apply them to Saskatchewan. "If the people of Saskatchewan have not sufficient courage to elect Social Credit, they are not fit to be citizens."
